Israelis Dance In Streets On Fourth Anniversary

Israel, short of food, crowded with penniless immigrants and surrounded by enemies, began the celebration of the fourth anniversary of her independence with joy. The country was in the throes of a new economic policy deliberately calculated to reduce its standard of living to a level approaching its means and the Minister of Industry, Dov Joseph, was in the United States with the mission of trying to keep the wolf from the door, says the New York Times, but there was dancing in the streets.

The nation was rejoicing in freedom, Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion said in a radio address, within the borders promised in the Bible with the words, "And I have set your border from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean."

On Mount Herzl in Jerusalem, Acting President Joseph Sprinzak opened the two-day celebration by lighting a torch in front of the tomb of Theodor Herzl, father of the Zionist movement. As the flame leaped up it was answered by a torch on Mount Scopus and other torches throughout the land that were lighted at the same time.

Members of Gadna, the young people's organization sponsored by the Army, paraded with torches through the streets of Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa. Half a dozen corvettes and other ships of the Israeli Navy, gathered offshore at Tel Aviv, put on a fireworks display.

Earlier, rabbis had placed a fifth crown on the tomb of King David on Mount Herzl. For each year of independence an additional crown taken from Torah rolls in destroyed synagogues of Europe will be placed on the tomb. The fourth crown had been loaned to American Jewry as a token of appreciation for their contributions.

[illegible] America, has granted to Israel a grant in aid of $10,000,000 for the purpose of gathering in our exiles and consolidating our independence."

Recalling that he had spent the last Independence Day in the United States, he asserted that "in no other country do Jews enjoy greater freedom and comfort than is enjoyed by Jews of that free and rich country." Apparently referring to the Soviet Union's sphere, he added that millions of Jews in other countries were observing the Independence Day with passionate feelings but silently, because "it is not given to them to express publicly their Jewish feelings."

Although the country has registered great achievements, Mr. Ben-Gurion declared, "we are still only at the beginning of our path. We are climbing a mountain and we must press forward until we reach the peak or we shall tumble down."

Among the achievements he mentioned was the beginning of serious development of the Negeb, which he felt would become a center of mass settlement.

"Our young pioneers, who receive training in the Army of Israel, have agricultural settlements in places which had never been touched by plow or seed," he said. He added that Beersheba now had a population of 20,000, Elath was becoming a port, and exploitation of the natural resources of the Negeb had begun.

"To all citizens of Israel and to all members of the House of Israel," President Chaim Weizmann, bedridden in his residence at Rehovoth, sent messages of greetings concluded with the words: "On this solemn day I would say this to all my brethren: the future of Israel rests on three foundations—brotherly love, constructive effort, and peace near and far."

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion warned Israel that she must continue her military preparedness, reports the New York Times.

"Our (Arab) neighbors still refuse to make peace with us," he said in a broadcast, "but the constant expansion of Israel's Army has planted in the hearts of our neighbors a healthy respect and we now are regarded as one of the leading military powers in the whole Middle East."

He added that Israel had to go ahead with military preparations "just as we must proceed toward strengthening peace in the world and in our land."

Predicting more hardship for the nation, he said, "we cannot hide from the clouds that loom above us, casting their shadows over the state—financial difficulties, an adverse trade balance and a shortage of housing and urgent necessities."

Communist anti-American streamers were trampled underfoot when crowds thronging the streets of Haifa clashed with Communists. Fights broke out when the Communists appeared carrying streamers proclaiming, "Long live the Israeli Army free from American influence!" Police restored order.

Says Aid To Israel Is In U.S. Interest

Senators Irving M. Ives and Herbert H. Lehman, speaking at a celebration marking the fourth anniversary of Israel's independence, joined in emphasizing that Israel is on the democratic side in the world struggle and that it is to the advantage of the United States to strengthen Israel in the Middle East, says the New York Herald Tribune.

The celebration at Carnegie Hall was sponsored by the American Zionist Council, an organization of eight national Zionist groups in the United States. According to the Gregorian calendar, Israel was established May 14, 1948. By the Hebrew calendar which Israel uses, that founding date was the fifth of Iyar which fell on April 30.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a message to the meeting read by his daughter, Miss Sarah Churchill, said: "As a Zionist from the days of the Balfour Declaration, I have watched with admiration the courageous effort of Israel to establish her independence and prosperity. May this and future anniversaries be celebrated with growing confidence and good will by Israel's friends throughout the world."

Senator Ives, in addition to urging economic and military assistance to Israel, condemned anti-Semitism as "the merchandise of the Godless" and a "cancer of democracy" which must be rooted out if democracy is to survive. "It is a tragic mockery of the death and devastation of the war against Hitler that anti-Semitism still exists," he said.

Discussing America's financial assistance to Israel, Senator Ives said that $75,000,000 proposed in Congress this year is a minimum requirement.

Senator Lehman said: "As an American and as an advocate of freedom, I feel that America serves its best by assisting, in every proper and practicable way, the free nation of Israel, while at the same time promoting and supporting peace, co-operation and economic progress throughout that area—pointing for all peoples toward the blessed goal of freedom."

Asserting that it is to America's interest that America should continue to support Israel, Senator Lehman said that in the face of the danger from totalitarianism "Israel has eagerly ranged itself in the ranks of the free nations."

Miss Churchill said her father has always identified himself with establishment of a Jewish state. Other speakers included Abba Eban, Israeli Ambassador to the United States, and Louis Lipsky, chairman of the American Zionist Council. Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion sent a message to the meeting stating that the role played by American Jewry in assisting Israel "becomes even clearer" as Israel celebrates its fourth birthday.

Israel's fourth anniversary as a nation was celebrated with colorful ceremonies at Ebbets Field under the auspices of the State of Israel $500,000,000 Bond Issue. Speakers at the fete emphasized Israel's strategic position in the Middle East because of her adherence to democratic ideals and principles and stressed the need for consolidating her economy.

In a recorded message to the large audience, which included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as the guest of honor, Mr. Ben-Gurion formally opened the second year's campaign for Israel's bond issue, which was floated in the United States on May 1, 1951.

Mr. Ben-Gurion said that his country's progress toward economic self-sufficiency constituted "only the beginning" and that "we cannot relax until we have achieved our full goal — an economy that will provide all the needs of our people."

Mayor Impellitteri, recalling his recent visit to Israel, declared that "it is in our interests, not only as Jews but as Americans, to strengthen Israel's economy as the foundation for its place as a strong democratic force in the strategic Middle East."

Henry Morgenthau Jr., chairman of the board of governors of the bond drive, told the audience that 400,000 persons had bought $125,000,000 in Israel bonds since the drive began last year.

Dr. Dov Joseph, Israel's Minister of Supplies, who flew to New York for the celebration said that "the people are ready to bear the short supply of food and to give up most of the comforts of life" to quicken the economic consolidation of their country.

Ebbets Field was decorated with bunting. A huge sign called attention to the bond as "the key to economic independence." Another sign said: "United States and Israel—United in Democracy." One of the highlights was an exhibit under spotlights of one of the four crowns from the tomb of King David in Jerusalem. The crown was sent to New York for the ceremonies by Moshe Shapiro, Minister of Religion, as "a symbol of appreciation for vital American assistance."

Billy Rose staged the program, for which Edward Arnold, motion-picture star, was master of ceremonies. The Star-Spangled Banner" was played by the United States Air Force Band from Mitchell Field Air Base. The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Isler Solomon,

Was Noted For Years For Restaurants

Sam Salvin, long a restaurateur and nightclub operator in New York, died in Doctors Hospital after a brief illness. His age was 59. He resided in the Shoreham Hotel, 33 West Fifty-fifth Street, which he owned. Mr. Salvin was co-owner of Manny Wolf's restaurant, Third Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, and was a partner in Cobbs Corner restaurant, Lexington Avenue and Forty-eighth Street.

He bridged the era between the days of Rector's, Shanley's and Reisenweber's and the present. Together with his father, Paul, who died in 1927, and Jimmy Thompson, he operated fourteen leading New York cabarets thirty-five years ago.

The Salvins were pioneers in popularizing the large dine-and-dance spots of Broadway and later were leaders in shifting cafes from the Broadway area to the East Side. They were credited with giving several celebrities their first chance through engagements in their cabarets, among them Paul Whiteman, Joe Frisco, Florence Mills and Gilda Gray. They introduced big name acts into their cafes, hiring Fritzi Scheff from the musical comedy stage, as well as chorus lines.

Early in his career, Mr. Salvin operated Rector's with his father and the late George W. Rector. The cafes run by the Salvins and Thompson included the Palais Royal, Moulin Rouge, Folies Bergere, Montmartre, Plantation, first Little Club, Club Royal, Pavillon Royal in Long Island, 400, Sans Souci, Bal Tabarin, Cafe de Paris, Carlton Terrace and Pekin. In Palm Beach, Mr. Salvin had run the Colony Club and the Patio Restaurant. In New York he had managed Dan Mayday's Riviera. More recently he operated the Park Avenue restaurant and the Monte Carlo.

He was born in New York and attended Staunton Military Academy in Virginia. During the first World War, he served as a second lieutenant in the Signal Corps. Surviving are his widow, Rose, and a sister, Mrs. Rene Abel.

Last Office Goes To Jerusalem

The Israeli Cabinet decided to move the Foreign Ministry from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as soon as possible, probably this summer. The Foreign Ministry is the last Government agency to have its main offices in Tel Aviv.

Although Israel proclaimed Jerusalem as her capital in 1949, most other countries declined to recognize it as such as long as the United Nations resolution internationalizing Jerusalem was on the books. Jordan and the other Arab countries also rejected internationalization at first, but have become staunch proponents of it since Israeli Jerusalem showed it could lead an independent existence.

Most diplomats avoided all official functions in Jerusalem at first, says the New York Times. In the last six months, however, they no longer made an issue of the matter and the Government has shifted more and more functions to Jerusalem. The Foreign Ministry will be housed in the first unit of a new Government center now being built. The modern sandstone structure will be ready by late summer, according to Government officials.

JEWISH LEADERS URGE U.S. SUPPORT OF RESTITUTION CLAIMS ON GERMANY

A delegation of Jewish leaders conferred with U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson and urged continued U.S. support for Jewish and Israeli material claims against Germany. The delegation, which consisted of the Praesidium of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, reported to Mr. Acheson on the progress of the negotiations with representatives of the Government of the German Federal Republic, which were conducted at The Hague. The delegation advised the Secretary that a settlement of Jewish material claims against Germany can only be reached within the framework of agreements which will satisfy the claims presented by both the Government of Israel and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany.

The delegation consisted of Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman, Jewish Agency for Palestine and presiding officer of the Praesidium of the Conference; Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee; Frank Goldman, president of Bnai Brith; Dr. Israel Goldstein, president, American Jewish Congress; Adolph Held, chairman, Jewish Labor Committee; and Moses A. Leavitt, executive vice-chairman, American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, and chairman of the Conference negotiating team.

The delegation emphasized the unique moral character of the Jewish claims against Germany which call for the restoration of plundered Jewish property, indemnification to victims of Nazi persecution, and the payment for the rehabilitation of survivors. The delegation stressed that speedy and satisfactory action by the German government is required in order to bring about a settlement of these claims. Any delay would raise serious doubts regarding the value of the declarations of Chancellor Adenauer, who acknowledged that the unspeakable crimes committed during the Nazi regime impose on the German people the obligation to make amends.

The negotiations between the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany and representatives of the German government were conducted in Wassenaar near The Hague from March 21 to April 8, 1952. At the same time, representatives of Israel and West Germany were carrying on parallel negotiations for $1,000,000,000 to cover the cost of rehabilitating in Israel the survivors of Nazi persecution.

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany demanded legislative measures to assure full restitution and indemnification to individual Jewish survivors of the Hitler terror. The Conference also asked for a payment of $500,000,000 in recognition of the vast assets which were confiscated by the Third Reich and will never be restored to their owners, who perished together with their families. The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany speaks for 23 major Jewish organizations in eight western nations.

The Israeli Government informed the Bonn Government through Dr. Nahum Goldmann in London that it will continue negotiations on reparations only if the West German Government gives assurances of the seriousness of its intentions and of a real desire

MARRIAGES

FLEISCHMAN-LIGHTSTONE

The marriage of Maxine Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lightstone, Michel Dibaud Avenue, to Roy Philip Fleischman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fleischman, Powell Avenue, took place at half-past six o'clock, on April 24, at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. Rabbi W. Shuchat, Cantor N. Mendelson, and Reverend J. J. Fromm officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a hand-made gown of cloud-blue tulle illusion. The skirt was fashioned in multiple layers of fine pleats, edged with white satin, and the fitted draped bodice had pleats at the shoulders. Her fingertip veil of matching tulle illusion was caught to a matching ruche, and she carried a shower spray of white camellias. Miss Ann Lita Stern, of Toronto, as maid of honor, and Misses Ann Bald, Eleanor Lightstone, Dundi Weintraub, and Rhoda Rubenstein, as bridesmaids, were dressed alike in ballet-length frocks of blush-pink accordion-pleated tulle, worn with toning hats, and they carried Colonial bouquets of pink roses and white split carnations. Henry Fleischman, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Marvin Corber, Stanley Goldberg, Mervin Mendelsohn, Gerry Nemeroff, Ellie Godel, and Douglas Cohen. White snapdragons, gladioli, and pink roses, with dogwood and palms, formed the decoration. Mrs. M. N. Fineberg played the wedding music. For the reception, in the hall of the synagogue, the flowers were pink roses, white carnations, snapdragons, and gladioli, with palms. Mrs. Lightstone received in a floor-length gown of blue-grey Chantilly lace, with a matching hat of lace and tulle, and a shoulder spray of pale pink orchids. Mrs. Fleischman was in a lilac-coloured tulle and lace gown, with a tulle hat of the same shade, studded with iridescent beads, and a deep purple orchid corsage. Later the couple left by motor for their wedding trip to New York; Chicago, Ill.; Las Vegas, New Mexico; and California, the bride wearing a grey flannel suit, with a white shirred hat, tan snakeskin accessories, and a cluster of baby orchids. The couple will reside on Somerled Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. David Stern and daughters, Misses Ann Lita and Sandra Stern, uncle, aunt, and cousins, of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lightstone, uncle and aunt, of the bride, all of Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. Jack Steinberg, cousins of the groom, of Ottawa, Ont.; Miss Marcia Lightstone, cousin of the bride, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. J. Wolf, cousins of the bride, of Chicago, Ill., were wedding guests.

When baby graduates from liquid foods to solids, fruit may be given to help the transition period. Applesauce makes a good food bridge and most babies like it. It can be given first as a puree and then gradually thickened.

BY ANITA ENGLE, IN THE NEW STATESMAN AND NATION

Jonathan, who is six-and-a-half, started school only this September. Before that, on account of the age limit, he was doomed to his third year at kindergarten; six months in England, and two and a half years in Israel. The kindergarten in Haifa was run by the Organisation of Working Mothers, the women's branch of the Histadruth. The children stayed there until 4 p.m., getting their meals and their afternoon rest. This may be common in other countries, but it is exceptional in Israel.

They learned an astonishing variety of things at this kindergarten. The stories and dances and songs were so extensive in variety that I can only imagine that they were taken in by absorption rather than by a direct process of memory. Every religious and national holiday was celebrated by its attendant festivities. We didn't have to teach Jonathan the Four Questions at Passover. He learned them at kindergarten. He also became very meticulous about the proper welcoming of the Sabbath, although this kindergarten belongs to the "Workers' stream," which is usually considered to be non-religious.

The children lived a sort of jungle life of their own, with a sorely learned code of behaviour, such as monkeys might have. I could only learn from casual clues dropped by Jonathan during his special times for being confidential—in the evenings, when I was getting him ready for bed, or when I had a late Saturday morning and he snuggled in beside me.

Once he seemed worried. "Shmulik said that God will demolish me," he told me. "You know better than that," I told him. "You know that God loves little boys. When anyone tells you that God will demolish you, you just laugh at him."

"Shmulik said you haven't got a nice face," Jonathan confided further, determined to get it all off his chest. That one couldn't be laughed off. "If anyone says anything rude about your family," I told him firmly, "you knock him down!"

(I shall probably have the Teachers' Union on my head, but that is the advice I always give to Jonathan. Not that I expect him to make use of it, but because I suspect that he won't.)

"Do you know what the boys say at kindergarten? They say that the way a baby gets into his Mummy's tummy is like this: the Mummy draws a picture of a baby on a piece of paper, then she swallows the paper."

"And what do you answer when silly boys say things like that?"

"I tell them 'You're crazy!' Mummies would get worms if they did that."

Jonathan used to tell me about the other children. The name of "Leah" began to crop up.

"Who is Leah?" I asked.

"Leah is a friend of mine. When the boys lock me in the lavatory, she brings teacher."

"Do you help her too?"

"Oh yes. When she bites their hands, I kick their feet."

My heart warmed to Leah, and I was glad that my son had such an able ally.

Then Leah left for school, and Jonathan acquired another girl friend. Her name was Dror, and she was only three years old. Jonathan used to call her "That li'l Honey Dror." And she was a honey. I don't know how long this had been going on, but I first learned about her when we were walking along the street one day, and a plump, pink little girl with black curly hair and shiny black eyes approached us with her Mother. She ran up to Jonathan and threw her arms around him, both of them exclaiming with delight at this wonderful meeting, though they had already been together most of the day.

Not long afterwards Jonathan began to go through a period of tantrums and naughtiness. We feared that the rather aged and severe kindergarten teacher was having a bad effect on him. Then we found that it had nothing to do with the teacher. The fact was that Mosheh, a blond, self-assured fellow inmate of the jungle, had won the affection of little Honey Dror and, what is more, had declared war on Jonathan. We made a very nice plastic necklace for Dror, and things returned to normal. But not for long, because Jonathan went to school and is dedicated to higher learning now.

Some weeks before school started we received a list of Jonathan's requirements. He and I went out and bought them with a little girl from the third grade, who knew the ropes. From that moment Jonathan developed a most serious and responsible demeanour. Often, instead of coming for a walk with me, he would retire to his room with a look of patient martyrdom, to do arithmetic. That meant copying out numbers from a book. Instead of being away from home until 4 in the afternoon, he would come home at 11.30 in the morning.

"Jonathan," I said to him, "now that you will be home in the afternoon, I hope you are not going to disturb us."

"What!" he exclaimed; "A boy who goes to school wouldn't disturb anyone!"

I told him that he was a clever little boy and wouldn't have any trouble with his lessons, but the only thing that might get him into trouble with the teacher was his habit of interrupting when grown-ups were speaking.

"I won't," he told me. "When the teacher is speaking, I'll just talk to the other boys."

By the time September 3 arrived, we were almost beside ourselves with excitement. I somehow saw Jonathan as a little worm standing before a big, juicy apple. At most he could gnaw only a little path through it, but there it was, intact, waiting for his first nibble. The nibble was more like the onslaught of a swarm of locusts. Fortunately the educational system for beginners here is geared for just such appetites. They don't waste time learning letters of the alphabet. They get straight on to words and sentences. The first day Jonathan came home with a little envelope containing cards. On each card was written a word that he had learned that day. There were seven words. In one order they spelled the words "Who Is Clean?" The card with "Who" on it could be changed for a card with "Dog" on it or "Dan" or "Mother" (a very short word in Hebrew). That evening he played word games, and the next day had more word cards, and so on. These words were also written on big cards and hung around the school room, together with objects illustrating them, until a child could probably recognise them standing on his head.

At the end of a month, Jonathan came home with his first reading book. And what was in this important publication? All the words and sentences and pictures that the children had become so familiar with during the month. Like old friends Jonathan greeted each sentence and each picture, and never tired of going through the little book just once more. On the back cover of the book is written in big letters: "Hurray! I'm reading!" When Jonathan comes to that bit, he raises his voice in a shout and capers round the room.

I don't know whether Christopher Columbus's mother was alive when her son discovered America. But if she was, then I know exactly how she must have felt.

Tom Gard's Note Book

When tools are stored indoors for winter, the gardener and the craftsman are reminded that a stitch in time still saves nine, and that a little care will prolong the life of equipment. Tools should be thoroughly cleaned, the metal rubbed down with steel wool and then given a rub with an oily rag to prevent rust. Then the handles might be given a coat of fresh paint — and they're all ready when spring appears.

THE WINTER DOORWAY

I always feel a doorway should convey the impression of welcome. This can easily be brought about by placing evergreens in tubs and locating them on either side of the entrance. But why not carry the idea a step farther and plant small spruce or cedars in the window box. Even sprays of cedar firmly embedded in the soil will serve the purpose on the window sill.

AN AID TO CARVING

A few nights ago a friend was telling me of his difficulty in learning to carve, when up spoke another friend and told him how to make an aid to carving from old forks and the drawer-pull from a dresser. This unique idea is worth passing on to our readers. The young war veteran decided then and there he would carry out the idea.

LAWN SWING

Last summer when in the Sherbrooke district I came across an attractive piece of lawn furniture, made of iron pipes and some canvass found in the boat-house. To brighten up the canvass the chap had painted in the pattern with red and green paint left over after he had painted his boats. The joints were all welded for strength, and it was noticed the kiddies could take a running jump into the swing without danger.

N.Y. Choreographer Calls Yemenite Dances Beauty Sensation

For several thousand years, Jews of Yemen, the little Arab Kingdom on the shores of the Red Sea, have celebrated weddings and other important occasions with dances both grave and gay.

On these occasions, they put on silks and brocades and heavy gold and silver jewelry, the making of which has been the Jews' main livelihood. While the Jewish dances were related to those of Arabs, the Jews were so much isolated that their dances developed along different lines—with more movement and more feeling.

When the entire Yemenite community was flown to Israel two years ago the Yemenite men got jobs picking oranges instead of hammering gold and silver. The girls took to wearing slacks. They began to sell their ancient jewelry and to feel self-conscious about their dances. They wanted to be Israelis, says the New York Times.

Some wise Israelis have been trying to restore to the Yemenite Jews a sense of the cultural value of their dances. They were reinforced by a young American, Jerome Robbins of the School of American Ballet, choreographer of the shows "The King And I" and "Call Me Madam," who has been brought there by the American Fund for Israel Institutions. Mr. Robbins says the Yemenite dances may also have export value.

The choreographer, who visited Israel for the first time last year, is conducting a three-week seminar in dancing for Israeli professional dancers, children and ethnic groups of folk-dancers. Each group is supposed to contain thirty persons, but eighty-five showed up for the first session of professionals.

"I think you're sitting on an oil well as far as the dancing potential in Israel is concerned," Mr. Robbins told a group of Israelis with admiration. He is using his own ballet, "Interplay," as a textbook with professionals and hopes they will learn enough of it by autumn of next year to send a group to the United States.

The New York City Ballet is ready to share a program with an Israeli group, he reported. It is about the folk-dancers and, above all, the Yemenites that Mr. Robbins is most enthusiastic, however. "I have my eye on two young Yemenite boys who would be a sensation in a New York night club," he remarked, but he thought it would be better for the Israelis to launch Yemenite dancing in the United States on an artistic level, says the New York Times.

Mr. Robbins spent an evening watching a performance of a Yemenite dance group directed by Sarah Levi. She has spent several years refining traditional dance forms and working out variations of the few basic Yemenite steps. One of their dances was on the theme of the adoration of God, another on Esau seeking his birthright, and a third on the joy of being in Israel.

"See how they smile to each other instead of trying to ingratiate themselves with the audience the way most of our dancers do," Mr. Robbins observed. "They are really feeling it. And see how loose and supple their bodies are. With more training these Yemenites would be sensational."

Visiting other folk-dancing groups, Mr. Robbins has found that out of twenty-five most popular dances, at least five are specifically Israeli in origin. While incorporating elements of Hungarian, Russian and other European dances and also of Yemenite and Arab dances, they have a special Israeli character. These are the ones Israelis prefer. They have a tendency, that Mr. Robbins finds sometimes is destructive, to deprecate the value of imported varieties and to try a forced growth of their own dance forms.

$4,000,000 WAS GRANTED IN J.D.C. LOANS

Loans totalling nearly $4,000,000 have been granted to needy Jews in Europe by the Joint Distribution Committee since the war, to help them reestablish themselves economically, it was reported by Monroe Goldwater, Chairman of JDC's Reconstruction Committee. More than 16,000 individuals, most of them heads of families, have been aided by the loans, Mr. Goldwater said, and extensive loan programs are still operating in Belgium, France, Italy, Austria, and Greece. A JDC loan program in Israel granted its one-thousandth loan to a disabled immigrant in the Jewish state, as part of the JDC Malben program for aid to aged, ill and handicapped newcomers to the Holy Land. Funds for JDC's overseas reconstruction, relief and resettlement programs are provided through the nation-wide campaigns of the United Jewish Appeal.

Most of the outstanding loans are to be repaid in five to seven years. Although funds for the loan organizations were originally provided by JDC, the operating management in each country consists of leaders of the local community, with JDC acting in an advisory capacity. In addition to the countries in which credit cooperatives are now operating, similar organizations formerly functioned in Poland, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, and Hungary. The largest of the funds is in Belgium, where loans totalling $1,646,300 were granted by credit cooperatives in Brussels and Antwerp from 1945 to the end of 1951. Totals for other countries include: Austria, $66,900; France, $889,000; Greece, $489,700; and Italy, $380,000.

A law providing for the issue of death certificates in respect of persons who are missing and believed to be dead has now been passed in the Israeli Parliament. The law covers two categories of missing persons: 1. Those who, having been resident or held property in Israel, have been missing for at least two years and are believed to have been killed in war, accidents or by acts of God. 2. Those whose last known residence was in Europe, Asia or Africa, but who disappeared between 1939 and 1945 in circumstances affording reasonable ground to believe that they died in consequence of events of war or racial, religious, political or national persecution. The District Court of Jerusalem was authorized to issue death certificates in cases of the first category. As to victims of World War II, the law conforms with the provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Declaration of the Death of Missing Persons, to which Israel has become a contracting State. This Convention provides that declarations issued by any contracting State shall constitute prima facie evidence of death in other contracting States. A central registry will be kept by the United Nations International Bureau for Declarations of Death.

WARNS ON NAZI FIFTH COLUMN

The Rev. Dr. William F. Rosenblum, preaching at Temple Israel in New York, warned that former Nazis now permitted to hold office in Germany would be a fifth column that would make a shambles of the Western world's cause in the event of a new war.

"The recent report that nearly 85 per cent of German officeholders today are former members of the Nazi party and that nearly all of them were involved in the murder of millions of Jews and others who refused to knuckle down to their persecutors is one of the most shocking and disturbing reports to come from Europe," Rabbi Rosenblum said.

"Unless we have the courage to root them out before we get into more than a cold war, these unconverted Nazis will be a fifth column that will make of NATO and of SHAPE and of all the agencies we are building up in order that our civilization may not be torn down, a shambles and a mockery."

NOTED COSTUME DESIGNER DIES IN EXILE

Miss Kate Friedheim, who designed costumes for the New York City Opera Company for the last five years, died in New York, at Mount Sinai Hospital. She was 47 years old. She executed the costumes for "Ariadne," "Love for Three Oranges," "Dybbuk," "Four Ruffians" and "Wozzeck."

Miss Friedheim was born in Hamburg, Germany, where she studied designing at the School of Arts. She was costume designer for the opera in Osnabruck for four years until 1933, when she was dismissed by the Nazis. She then designed costumes for the Jewish Theatre in Hamburg.

She came to the U.S. in 1940, and later was joined by her mother, Mrs. Hedwig Friedheim, with whom she lived at 251 West Seventy-first Street. Also surviving is a sister, Dr. Ilse Friedheim.

GREAT SCHOLAR ENDS VISIT

Dr. Martin Buber, Professor Emeritus of Social Philosophy, Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and one of the founders of the Zionist movement, brought to a close a six-month visit to the United States with an address at Carnegie Hall. A crowd of 2,500 attended the meeting, arranged by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America to honor the 74-year-old scholar who had traveled throughout the country and lectured at major universities.

Speaking on "Hope For This Hour," Dr. Buber said the world was split as never before, with the two sides regarding each other as the embodiment of falsehood. He called for the establishment of new standards of perception and understanding to begin genuine conversations between the two camps.

A citizen of Chicago who has come up with a unique recipe for fathers who want to keep a close and watchful eye on their GI sons, is Gilbert Elias, now a Master Sergeant serving with the 8063d Mobile Army Surgical Hospital in the Far Eastern combat area. His son, 18-year-old Philip, is a private first class in the same outfit. Last year the Chicago reserve unit of which both were members was reactivated. (In civilian life they were both employees of the Chicago Daily News.) The son was ordered to report to Fort Lewis, Wash., and so was the father. For eleven months they trained together. Then came an overseas assignment: Japan, to the same unit.

The Canadian Jewish Congress has received reassuring information from the Canadian authorities to the effect that there have been no anti-Semitic statements since the end of the war in the foreign language press in Canada which, due to the considerable post-war immigration, has gained both in circulation and importance. These newspapers, read especially by newcomers from Eastern European and Baltic countries, now report on matters of Jewish interest, including Israel, in a fair manner, it is said.

The Life Story Of Rabbi Hillel

On these Sabbaths, when we continue reading the Pirke Avos, maxims of the Talmudic sages, we pause to meditate upon the life of one of the greatest and yet least known of the Rabbis of the Talmud. Hillel I—or Hazaken lived in a most exciting period of Jewish history, the first century before the Christian era. There is opinion abroad that Jesus of Nazareth was a pupil of Hillel.

Talmudic legend, in order to show the great love for learning which was Hillel's, tells the story of how this youth who came from Babylon had to earn his livelihood by manual labour when he attended the great Rabbinical school in Jerusalem. When one Friday he failed to earn enough for his daily sustenance and at the same time to pay the fee to the porter at the door of the academy, he was forced to climb to the roof of the school and via the skylight listen to the lectures. A snowstorm broke out and on that winter Sabbath morning, students and teachers who had gathered for morning worship, beheld a human form on the skylight. They rushed to his aid and revived him.

This young man became one of the most brilliant students in the school of Shmaya and Abtalyon. He later succeeded these great teachers and in turn became the head of the academy as well as the head of the Sanhedrin, the supreme court. His career is a shining example of Jewish democracy. In the Jewish republic of letters, the humblest may rise to position, depending upon his intellectual attainments and, of course, good character. Learning and character constituted a combination which gave a man opportunity for leadership withip the Jewish community.

Hillel lived at a time when King Herod was on the throne. Two extreme parties contended against one another. There were the assimilationists who flirted with the Roman authorities, who were then in control of Palestine; and then the other party consisted of the Orthodox, who adhered to the letter of the law, often at the expense of the spirit of the law. We are indebted to the great Rabbi Hillel who insisted the law must be made to square with life. It was this great teacher who introduced the Reform, by which debts incurred during the sabbatical year, if registered with the courts, are collectible. In this regard Hillel anticipated the common law and the laws of Britain and the United States, wherein the statute of limitations does not apply to debts when registered with the court.

Hillel was a great Reformer in his day and generation. He made Judaism live. He is best known in the history of our people as the formulator of the "Golden Rule." When a heathen came unto him and expressed a desire to take on Judaism, and the heathen requested of Hillel that he be taught all of Judaism while standing on one foot, Hillel cleverly admonished him that the whole of Judaism may be summed up in the following: "What is hateful unto thee, do not do unto thy fellow man." This "Golden Rule" was pronounced by Jesus in a positive form. Of course, Hillel also advised the heathen to go and study and indicated to him that consideration for fellow man is the basis of Judaism and that all the rest of the law is but a commentary.

In every legislation and regulation Hillel always sought the element of humanity. He was a great public spirit and introduced a sevenfold method of interpreting the Torah. He was known for his learning and his saintliness. One of his best known maxims is: "If I am not for myself, who will be for me? Yet, if I am for myself only, what am I? And if not now, when?"

According to the teaching of Hillel and of Judaism, the "self" is very important. Judaism has never requested of its adherents to negate the self. But along with the emphasis on the self Judaism has stressed social responsibility. Pity, indeed, the man who lives on terms of self alone. How meaningless is his life, who fails to share in communal responsibility. When one fails to share his joys with the community, the community rightfully fails to share the sorrows with the individual. And who is free from sorrows? Every individual owes so much to society and it is his duty to try to make the world a little better than he has found it, by sharing with fellow man the burdens and joys of life. When the sage Hillel admonishes us "If not now, when?" he gives emphasis to the preciousness of time. How we squander time! How we fail to be able to count the minutes, the hours and the days! In Judaism time has ever been sacred. According to Hillel's teaching it is important to invest every moment of life with sacredness and make every day meaningful. Alas, the neglect of many to do that which should have been done in kindness, in generosity, in support of great causes, and then life is soon spent in nothingness and it is all too late. "If not now, when?"

For forty years Hillel was the head of the Sanhedrin, from the year 30 B.C.E. to the year 10 of the common era. Like Ezra of old, he restored the law and inspired many disciples by his humility and saintliness. Often he would suddenly take leave of his disciples and say to them that he had an important guest to entertain. When one day his disciples pressed him for information regarding the guest, he informed them that the important guest was a heavenly guest, his own soul.

Today it is here with us and it may be gone tomorrow. Therefore it is important for every human to spend every day in meditation, in order that he may take stock of his spiritual being and not neglect his soul life. This practice of Hillel reminds us of the great Gandhi, who in our own day and generation prayed and meditated daily and at least took one day of the week to observe that day in silence and in soul reflection.

Well would it be for our people, to study again and again the life of Rabbi Hillel Hazaken, scholar and saint, one of the great architects of our precious Judaism.

ISRAELIS DANCE

President Truman sent the following greetings to President Chaim Weizmann of Israel: "On this anniversary of the independence of Israel, the people of the United States join me in sending to your excellency and to the people of Israel felicitations and sincere good wishes."

The greatest display of military might in Palestine since the British departed was the high point of fourth independence anniversary celebrations. Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, Acting President Joseph Sprinzak and the Army Chief of Staff, Maj. Gen. Yigal Yadin, reviewed a two-hour parade, including about 4,000 infantry in British-style uniforms and helmets, forty-two United States-built Sherman tanks, sixty British-built half-tracks and scores of light and heavy anti-aircraft guns, 75-milli-meter field pieces and 25-pounders of varied national origin.

Three Flying Fortresses and squadrons of Spitfires, Mosquitos and Dakotas reared overhead as blue-clad Air Force units marched past the reviewing stand. Except for a flamethrower unit that was displayed for the first time, the parade showed no equipment foreign military attaches did not already know was in the Israeli forces, says the New York Times. The infantry units, including many dark-skinned immigrants from Iraq and Yemen, had learned to march.

They were far different from the rough, tough former Haganah militiamen who, at the first Independence Day parade in 1949, were unable to make their way through the dense crowds that came to cheer them and had to reach the reviewing stand by a circuitous route.

Ten thousand Israelis again this year poured into Tel Aviv from all over the country to applaud the armed forces. They had occupied vantage points on Allenby Road and housetops since early morning. What the crowd saw, says the Times, might well instill in them a new sense of security and underlined Mr. Ben-Gurion's words over the radio:

"The constant expansion of the Army of Israel, both in numbers and in power, has planted in the heart of our neighbors a healthy respect toward Israel and we are now regarded as one of the leading military powers in the whole of the Middle East."

The crowd reserved its loudest applause for the teen-age members of Gadna, the army-sponsored young people's organization, and for the special unit that devotes itself to raising vegetables on army property. These were followed by the tractors, bulldozers and other equipment of engineering units.

A message of greeting from President Chaim Weizmann, who is bedridden in his Rehovoth home, was delivered to Mr. Ben-Gurion, standing in the reviewing stand, by three motorcyclists. The Weizmann message and Mr. Ben-Gurion's reply then were read over a loud-speaker system audible along the entire four-mile route of the parade.

The reviewing stand was situated in Arlozoroff Street at the northern end of Tel Aviv, at a point from which, as though symbolically, every visible building had been built since the founding of the state. Similar smaller parades were held in many parts of the country. At Beersheeba and Nazareth, Arab sheikhs called on Military Governors to express anniversary congratulations.

to reach an honorable settlement.

The Israeli Government was bitterly disappointed by the turn that the reparations negotiations at the Hague, The Netherlands, took, it was reported by the New York Times on April 28.

"It is obvious that the Germans are trying to get out of it cheap—and if possible at the expense of the United States Government," one high Israeli observed. He said the Germans planned to approach Washington for help in meeting Israel's claims.

This official explained that the assurances by which the Germans might redeem the situation could be delivered in the form of a public statement by the West Germany Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer; a letter from him, a statement by someone else in the name of the Government, or by a statement by the head of the Bonn delegation. Dr. Adenauer agreed last December to accept $1,000,000,000 as the basis for negotiations on West Germany's share.

played the Israeli national anthem, "Hatikvah," in addition to a special program by Jewish composers. Mischa Elman, violinist, Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, and Earl Wilde, pianist, were the soloists.

Stage, motion-picture, radio and television personalities appeared on the program, including Milton Berle, Hazel Scott, Sid Caesar and Sam Levenson. Deems Taylor gave the commentary for the symphonic concert and John Garfield read Israel's Declaration of Independence.
